demonstrating transformative methods and techniques that are embraced and replicated everywhere.⁴ This academy has welcomed nearly 15.000 educators from all around the world.

C. Synopsis of The Film

The story begins with Clark leaving his small hometown in North Carolina, hoping that he can also make a big teaching in the big city. Carrying high hope and big dreams, Clark embraced the busy live in the city, working as a waiter for a restaurant at a part time job. He was able to land in Harlem public school despite discouragements from friends and colleagues. Thinking that he is too weak and too nice for the 6th grades students who belong to the bottom group of the graduating student's reluctant that Clark can make it. He was given the task of improving the class score and passed the state examination.

Clark endures the rudeness of the class on the 1st time and suffers even worst as the day passed but Clark never gives up on them. Instead, he tries to know his students better by visiting them at their time. One of them was Shemeika Wallace, a 12 year old girl while helping to raise his brother and sisters. She lives at home with her mother, who works two jobs and she has to take care of her little brothers, so she can't do her homework and can't be a kid. To cover her feelings about not being able to do anything, she just pretends she doesn't want to work and doesn't want to do anything at school.

Julio Vasques who is juvenile delinquent and Tayshawn who has a penchant for graffiti. With that, he sees the reasons why the students acted the way, they didn't get much attention and importance from their family. Since then, He treats his students as his family and works beyond and above his profession, to reach out to them. He created distinctive rules in his classroom and uses contemporary teaching methods and techniques suited for his students. He tries to renovate the classroom and make it more feasible for his students to learn. He gives incentives to them and makes them feel that they can trust him. But despite all these efforts, the students have not appreciated a single act from him. That is the time that he almost gives up.

Despite having disheartened spirit, Ron Clark still believes in the ability and flair of the students in his class. He has in his mind the thought that the kids can do more than mind what he is asking them to do. With that in mind, he tried to recharge and revive his strength by exploring New York city with a friend and go back to school with a rejuvenated purpose of helping his students dream big and make it real. Students think that Ron Clark will not show up again just like their previous teacher. Much to their surprised,Clark comes back with better and brighter ideas on how he can "fit in" he tries to build rapport by playing with them and teaching them on his spare time. He gave exciting challenges to promote silence and good study habits.

He applies different teaching strategies and thing of how the kind best acquire learning. He intensified his intensive scheme and make sure that kids work are appreciated. He even tries to do choose for his students just to make surer that they will do their homework.

Some parents get mad at him, assuming that the is already meddling with the private interest, but he always address the need of these kids to have time to study to achieve their highest potentials. With all these and more, he gradually sees the academic improvement of the class and the changes in their behaviour are tremendously notice. Clark constantly the importance of having big dreams and making them come true which inspire the students do their best to pass the state exam. He always does the extra mile in teaching them and spends almost all of his time educating the students. His health suffers from pneumonia but that does not stop him from reviewing the students for the exam. He has recorded instructional videos for them to watch. After the state exam, Ron Clark organizes a small party for a job well done and to honour outstanding students.

The principle arrives that with the good news, it was the result of the state exam. Everyone was amazed with how the class performed, Ron Clark's class turned out to be the best performing class in the school, they even out do the honour class. One remarkable result was one of the students; Shameika Wallace got a perfect score, which no one of the district ever does. Ron Clark was delighted and ecstatic, seeing his students going one step closer to their dream.
